National Credit Union Youth Month April 2018

The Science of Savings

Can you save for the future?

Given the importance of financial skills, it's important to teach your child the essentials about money. Children as young as three years old can understand concepts like saving and spending.

Parents are the biggest influence on their children, so it's up to us to teach them how to make wise choices.

The Five Most Important Lessons to Teach Your Kids.

1. You may have to wait to buy something you want.
2. You need to make choices about how to spend money.
3. The sooner you save, the faster your money can grow.
4. When comparing colleges, be sure to consider how much each school would cost.
5. You should use a credit card only if you can pay the balance off in full each month.

Come in and start a savings account for your child and receive a free gift.
